

I oppose the effort by the Consumer Bankers Association to alter Indiana's current Telephone Privacy act. During its existance, our household has greatly enjoyed the almost total absence of intrusive and unwanted telephone calls. Furthermore, my communications with those companies with whom I have an "established" business relationship has not suffered. The CBA simply wants additional opportunities to push intrusive marketing on consumers.